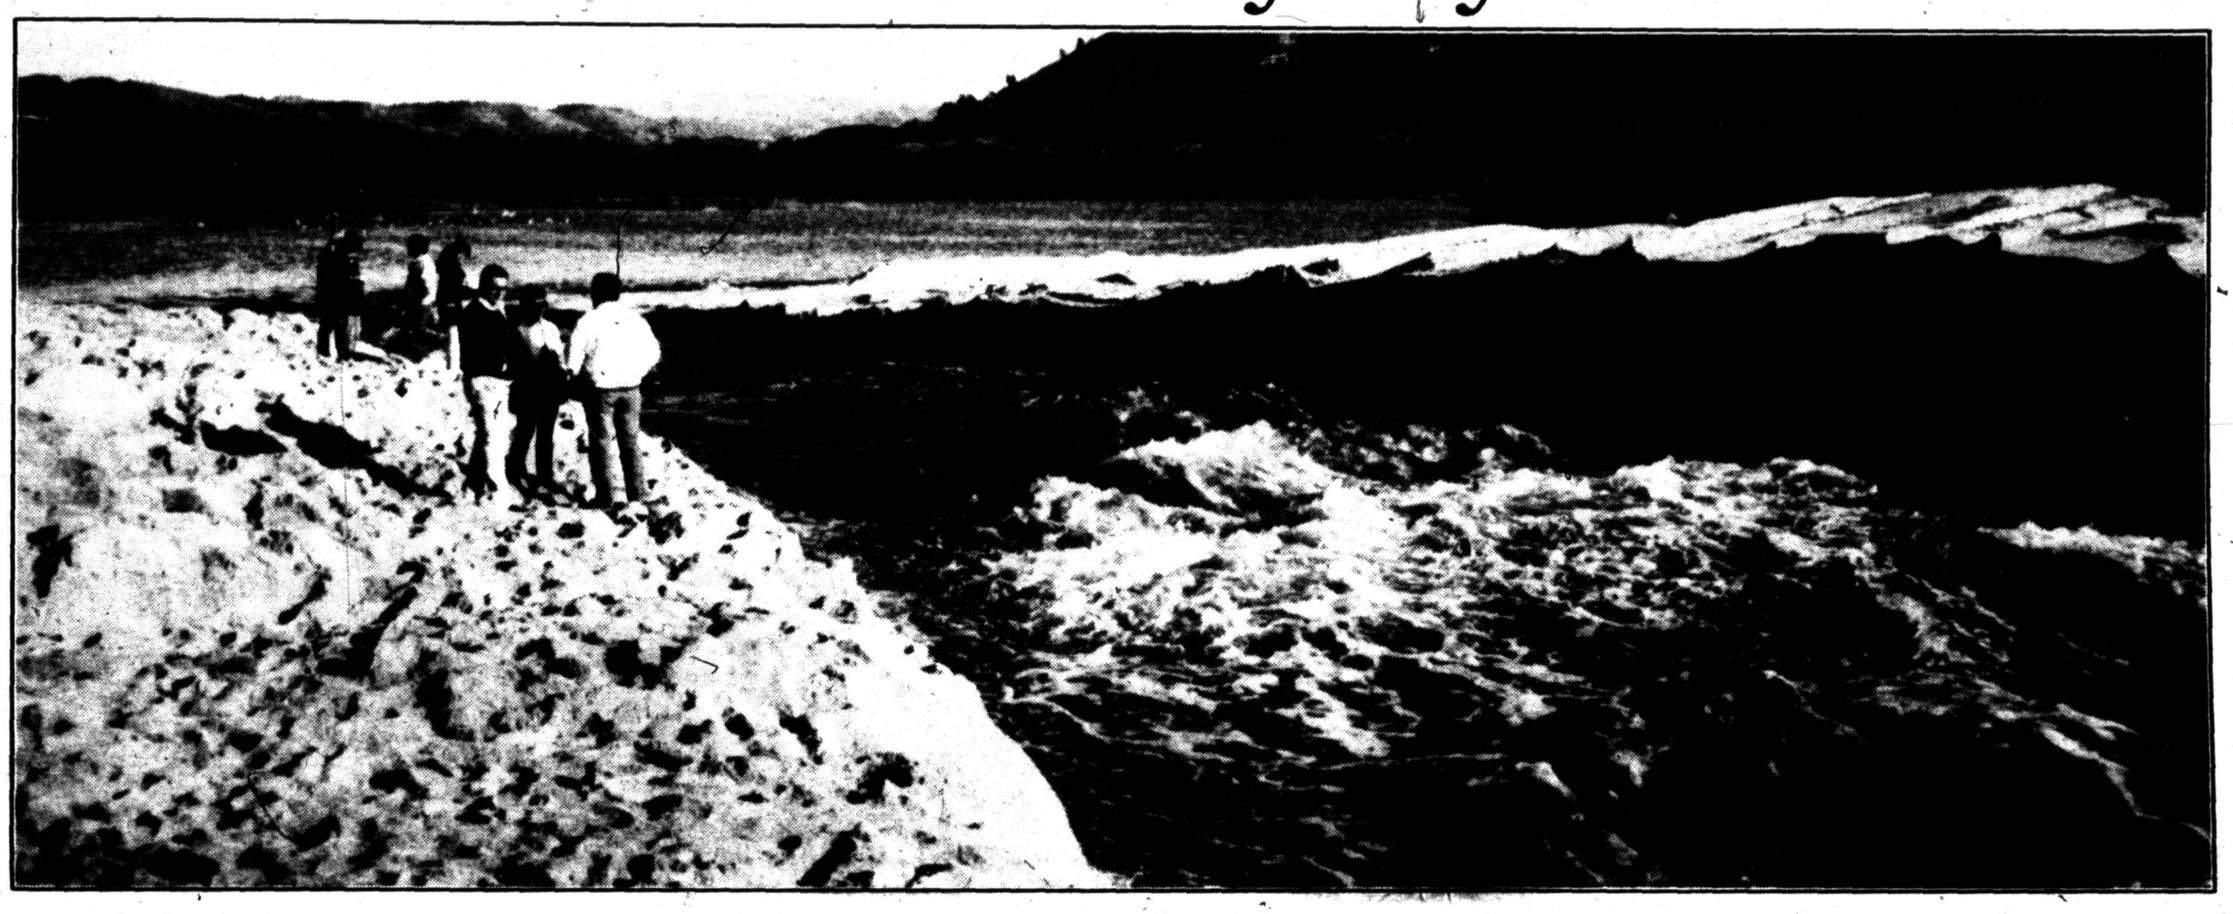
A river's Odyssey



THE LAGOON at the mouth of the Carmel River reached its capacity Sunday afternoon, triggering the traditional release of water into the ocean. Because of heavy rains, the opening of the river came five weeks earlier this year than in 1992 when it opened on Feb. 11, according to Pine Cone records. (Laura Hamilton photo)

Council closes chapter on latest Carmel tree saga

By PAUL WOLF

THE SAN Jose Mercury New picked up the story. The local television stations have followed it. Newspapers made it seem like the most important thing happening in Carmel these days.

In fact, the latest battle of pine versus property – first reported in The Pine Cone in its Dec. 17 issue –may not have been quite that consequential. But it has managed to divide Carmel into two camps.

The unanimous action of the Carmel City Council Tuesday afternoon doesn't reflected the difficulty with which the vote was passed down. Before a full complement of television cameras, the five-person council agreed 5-0 to allow Carmel resident Peter Levy to remove a massive and intrusive 65-year-old Monterey pine from his property at Monterey Street and Valley Way.

"The tree is not a symbol of the rain forest," Levy told the council before its vote. "I am trying to save a house of historical value. This is not a precedent."

Try as he might to keep it from being some kind of symbol, the house turned into just that — a symbol of Carmel's urban forest if not the rain forest.

"A constant struggle"

"Our beauty and our fame," said Linda Smith, "have been maintained by a constant struggle, like this one."

But in the end, the council saw no way

CUSD has reversal of fortune with PB Co. taxes

By PAUL WOLF

THE SCHOOL buses will be a little older than otherwise, and they will require a few more trips to the shop.

Moreover, some school buildings may be neglected as "deferred maintenance" may be deferred just a bit longer.

This is the likely prospect resulting from a setback for the Carmel Unified School District — which is experiencing a partial reversal of fortune with the recent tax reassessment of Pebble Beach.

The Pebble Beach Co. will pay $2.5 million less in taxes as a result of the settlement it made with the county Sept. 9. The value of Pebble Beach parcels was lowered from an original $841 million to $600 million.

One thing is clear now Dec. 10, property tax deadline, has passed: the district is hurt by the revaluation.

With its Dec. 10 deadline for property taxes, the company paid a bill totalling $3. 05 million as a first installment. Its second installment, due in April, will be for the same amount.

Pebble Beach's total taxes paid last year were $8.5 million.

Windfall for schools

When, in June 1990, Japanese golf course mogul Minoru Isutani bought Pebble Beach for a soaring $841 million, the CUSD was poised for a windfall. And, in effect, it got one.

Though it is hard to say to the dollar how much it benefited, one county official said Carmel schools were beginning to receive an additional $500,000 annually from county taxes collected from the resort.

Following last year's sale — for an surprisingly low estimated $525 million — Isutani, the seller, sought to relieve his own tax problems with the county by seeking a new, lower valuation.

The settlement has left broad implications for those agencies that rely on county taxes.

Just last month, the district received a letter from the county stating it would have to return $165,000 for the current 1992-93 fiscal year. The district has a budget of $14 million.

Perhaps that sum doesn't seem too great. But translated into, say, two school buses, it means a bit more.

"It was a windfall for us two years ago, but we realized that this situation may not hold," said school board member Hilton Bialek. "Because we never seriously thought of our budget being permanently increased by that much, I don't think of this as losing money."

Long saga

It has been a long saga for "the most complicated property in California," as one county official termed it.

Isutani had contended that the $841 million sum he paid for the property two-and-a-half years ago was inflated. He argued the valuation was bloated with such "intangibles" as the Lone Cypress logo and trademark and golf memberships.

The settlement was struck amid a series of drawn-out assessment hearings

JOHN BIRKS (Dizzy) Gillespie, beloved trumpeter who enlivened the first Monterey Jazz Festival and was on hand for the retirement of founder Jimmy Lyons 35 years later, died Wednesday morning in Englewood Hospital of his New Jersey home town.

Rumors of his passing began circulating in Carmel Wednesday afternoon and were confirmed by Virginia Wicks, Dizzy's official spokesperson, during a telephone call to her Southern California office.

Wicks said Dizzy died at 10:45 a.m. local time of pancreatic cancer. He was 75. Wednesday was the birth anniversary of his wife, Lorraine.

A matter of principle

THIS IS arraignment day for Tom Oliver, president of Pebble Beach Company. Indicted by a federal grand jury late last month, Oliver and five others, face serious charges of conspiracy and bank fraud.

The charges are serious because they bluntly point to alleged and insidious white collar crime. Oliver, who apparently does not see himself as a public figure, insists he is innocent and that whatever the charges amount to, they have nothing to do with his position as president of Pebble Beach Company.

We defend his right to proclaim innocence until proven guilty, but we couldn't disagree more with his presumption that federal charges of bank fraud have nothing to do with his Pebble Beach title — however titular that may be. To fail to comprehend, or perhaps care, that the charges are scandalous even in the face of presumed innocence and that there is a public loss of credibility at risk is an arrogant and indefensible act.

Who, we ask, feels comfortable doing business with a company whose chief officer is under a federal indictment for bank fraud?

And we puzzle over the inaction of the company's Japanese owners who obviously have a significant investment to protect. For Oliver and his Japanese superiors to ignore this embarrassing chapter in what has been a glorious history of Pebble Beach is to cast a dark cloud over a respectable peninsula institution.

This is the time to show principle and integrity. Oliver should step aside until he is proven innocent or guilty.

Deadline looms for zoning peitition drive

THE PETITION drive to secure a referendum on the comprehensive Carmel zoning ordinance approved last month is running out of time.

At Carmel Pine Cone deadline Wednesday morning, Jan. 6, petitioners had not yet submitted to the city clerk the 403 signatures needed to put the matter before the people.

The deadline is 5 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 7.

The Carmel City Council approved the controversial zoning package Dec. 8. Opponents of the ordinance have had 30 days to garner signatures from 10 percent of Carmel's registered voters to have a referendum scheduled.

City Clerk Jeanne Brehmer said the petition, should it be submitted in time, will need to be looked over and verified.

The man driving the petition has been resident Al Eisner. "I don't have any information for you," said Eisner, who was contacted by the Pine Cone Wednesday morning.

Eisner wouldn't comment on whether he thought he could meet the deadline.

Correction

DUE TO an editing error, an item appearing in the "Pine Whispers" section of the Dec. 31 issue of the Carmel Pine Cone erroneously reported that composer Mary Lynn Place-Badarak was involved in crisis counseling.

Dr. Place-Badarak, a gifted musician, taught music theory at the University of California, Santa Cruz for several years. She is currently occupied as a composer of choral and chamber music. Her recent compositions have been premiered by Santa Cruz Chorale, which she founded in 1983, by members of the music faculty at UCSC and by Santa Cruz Music Works.

Police department

Dear Editor:

I am writing to you about a rarely seen but always present commodity we have in Carmel, The Carmel Police Department.

Normally, the only time we think about police here in Carmel is when we receive a parking ticket or some other traffic violation. Well, this is the attitude I had until about four days ago when an Officer Poitras from the Carmel Police Department called me to inform me that the parties responsible for the theft of two of my vehicles had been arrested.

There had been a recent crime wave' involving vehicle break-ins in my neighborhood and due to the short-staffing of the Carmel Police Department, I had just accepted that we had to take numerous extra precautions every night to protect our belongings.

I have discovered that only two officers are on duty at night due to an extremely limited budget allotted for our police protection. I think this is ludicrous.

I also was informed that the budget is again being cut, which will mean even lower salaries for the lowest paid (and hardest working) police force on the peninsula. The police officers, working on their normal shifts (no additional officers or detectives assigned) captured these criminals who were "having their way" with my vehicles and many other vehicles in the Carmel area.

I have also heard rumors that some of our hard working officers are considering employment elsewhere due to the possibility of lowering of the lowest wages in the peninsula. My wife and I are sleeping much better now knowing that the Carmel Police Department has arrested these criminals, however, what kind of job can we expect from a department that is seemingly unappreciated and underpaid!

Well, I appreciate them and I hope this letter will spur some of my fellow Carmelites to notify our city officials of this injustice to our police department. We pay a little more to live in Carmel and we deserve a well-staffed police department.

My sincerest thanks to the Carmel Police Department for a job well done!

Just and proper

Dear Editor:

The letter by Erling Lagerholm in last week's Pine Cone said it all and very well.

After two years of extensive study and public hearings by the Planning Commission and the Carmel City Council, the actions taken by the Council regarding chances to the CC zone were just and proper. It is time to lay this issue to rest.

Al Eisner, you should drop your silly petition drive for an election which will only be costly to the city and its residents. Where were you during the two years of study and public hearings?

Carmel residents should be wary of signing any petition blindly put before them without reading it carefully and questioning the petitioner about the issues involved. Let us not act like sheep.

Local battle heats up over statewide school choice initiative

By SCOTT BREARTON

LOCAL SUPPORTERS of the Parental Choice in Education Amendment are gearing up for a battle with public school administrators who maintain the proposed legislation would threaten the welfare of the public school system.

The initiative, which will be on the June 1994 state ballot, would allow parents to receive a $2,500 state voucher for each school-age child. The vouchers could be redeemed at private or parochial schools.

While the vote is still 18 months away, battle lines are already being drawn.

Under the measure, schools that become voucher-redeeming, whether public or private, would be largely exempt from California Education Code guidelines.

The school choice initiative was founded by Stephen Guffanti, a doctor from Southern California. According to Mike Leahy, Director of the Central Coast Chapter of Parents for Educational Choice, Guffanti came to the conclusion that "the public school system was miseducating youth in the inner-city, and that the absurdities of public education had to be reversed."

Leahy says the initiative would "take 50 percent of what the state spends per student and give it to the parent in the form of a 'scholarship,' which could be redeemed at any school – public or private – that the parent feels best meets the needs of their child...We're not subsidizing parochial schools, we're subsidizing families."

Interestingly, not all private school administrators support the plan to amend the California State Constitution.

Caution

"The traditional response from most independent schools is that we need to be cautious of programs funded with government money," said Joseph Wandke, Headmaster at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach. "Usually with government money comes control," said Wandke, "which is something we have gone through great pains over the years to avoid. Our official position (on the Parental Choice in Education Amendment) is that we don't have a position."

Proponents of the initiative argue that administrative costs in the California public school system are bloated, that only 40 cents of every tax dollar ever reaches the classroom, and that there are 127 non-teaching public school employees for every 100 classroom teachers. They contend their initiative would actually reduce state taxes for education.

Leahy says the proposed legislation would benefit three distinct groups of parents:

•Disadvantaged, low-income parents could "buy their way out of an unsafe public school system."

•Parents who feel that public school methods of teaching underestimate the capacity of their children to learn. "These parents pay school taxes, then pay private school tuition on top of that in order to give their kids a quality education; so they wind up paying twice for their kids' education."

•"Devout parents whose religious beliefs specifically prohibit (the discussion of) issues such as homosexuality and abortion" could send their children to

Water officials agree with grand jury recommendation

By PAUL WOLF

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District has been hampered by bureaucratic and regulatory requirements, which have made more difficult its charge of boosting water supplies.

So explained General Manager Jim Cofer, who responded to the 1992 grand jury's recommendation that the district disband if it cannot demonstrate the confidence of the peninsula electorate.

"The gridlock has been in dealing with the dozen independent agencies from which we need approval," Cofer said, referring to such creatures as the EPA, Fish & Game and the National Marin Fisheries, just for starters. "The board and district have always worked as hard as they can."

The grand jury passed on four weighty recommendations with regard to the water district: They are:

• That, if the district cannot secure voter approval for capital projects like the project dam and desalination project, it should be disbanded.

• That the district conduct public forums to report on the progress of its ongoing (and so far stalled) water supply projects.

• That it should stage a plebiscite on such projects.

• That the grand jury monitor the district in how well it achieves the previous three recommendations.

Water Board Chairman Dale Hekhuis was not defiant. He merely commented:

Historic preservation takes on sacred tone

By PAUL WOLF

FROM AN elevated lectern and before majestic stained glass, two men spoke in a fashion both solemn and liturgical.

In this soft church light, they weren't talking about religion. Yet there was a kind of pervasive spirituality. The subject Monday evening was historic preservation.

St. Mary's-by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove made a sublime venue for speakers and an audience of about 100. Attending, among others, was an assortment of Central Coast planners, preservation advocates and city officials — including Mayor Ken White and about half a dozen others from Carmel.

With the sacred backdrop, this particular evening's program in the week-long conference of the National Trust for Historic Preservation Trust would transform a topic: preserving old and significant buildings became less political concern and more sacred duty.

More sermon than speech

"Let us strip away all the rhetoric," declared one of the speakers, Dwight Young, who is senior communications associate with the Trust, which was conducting the conference.

His speech was slow and modulated, more characteristic of a sermon than a speech. He communicated his message about old and important buildings, and the cityscapes of any region's past. "They are a people's unconscious art — the outdoor galleries...recording the broad and ordinary flow of experience."

"Let us strip away all the rhetoric."

—Dwight Young

With its newly adopted historic preservation ordinance, and its nearly completed survey of its landmark buildings, Carmel is trying to keep up with the movement after a slow start.

This is the first time the Trust has held such a conference on the West Coast. In fact, Carmel became a case study for the conference, and a tour of the village was conducted Tuesday.

As for Young, his message was that textbook history is partial at best. Its pages preserve the extraordinary rather than commonplace. The buildings and cityscapes his movement seeks to preserve understands "the overwhelming importance of the ordinary," he said.

"How can we leave without our lives? How will we know it's us?"

—Grapes of Wrath

The Good Book

As though citing a passage from Good Book itself, Young recalled when, in Steinbeck's Grapes of Wrath, the Jodes were preparing to leave Oklahoma and could not take all their things. "How can we leave without our lives?" one of the characters laments. "How will we know it's us?"

What was ours was us! Better still, what was ours is us!

The other speaker, Peter Brink, the Trust's vice president of programs, services and information, was somewhat less lofty.

He recounted the genesis of the movement — a reaction to all that was lost as a result of heavy-handed urban renewal projects.

"We fought for our communities because we wanted to live there," he said simply.

Preservation consultant

The speakers were introduced by Kent Seavey, a local preservation consultant and a veritable encyclopedia of information. He passed on some arcane facts about the 106-year-old Gothic revival church, "the jewel and crown of Pacific Grove's architectural heritage."

But it was Young who defined the tone of the evening, and described a movement that aims to stay "in constant touch with the tangible elements of our history rarely touched on in books."

to eliminate the dangers of the encroaching tree both to life and property. Indeed, the floor in the bedroom was already buckling, and there is no guarantee it would not do more damage.

It was a struggle between sublime sentiments and unflinchingly practical ones.

Declared another resident, Edwin Lee, rather bluntly, "If the tree's a nuisance, I would hope the city would have a nuisance-abatement conscience."

Council thus decided: the mature will go down; two seedlings will be planted with the assistance of the city forester.

With the final chapter in the saga closed, there were some lingering worries.

Some on Tuesday evening expressed the fear certain people would come away from the debate as "tree-haters"; others resented being branded "environmental extremists" just for thinking the house and the tree could be saved.

All the while, the T.V. cameras were there to capture what they would surely turn into just a momentary glimpse of a classic Carmel debate.

THE TREE

Grand jury makes conditional recommendation on MPWMD

"the grand jury says over the 15 year history it has failed to get new sources of water. That is a factual statement and I accept it fully. I am in whole-hearted agreement with that statement. If we have an organization that cannot carry out its basic function, that it has no rational to exist."

He added, "We don't feel we are on the defensive because they have simply spoken the truth."

Bureaucratic hoops

Nevertheless, Cofer explained that the district has been hampered by all the bureaucratic hoops it must jump through. "It's unfortunate the grand jury didn't see we are closer than ever on a number projects: the Paralta Well, desal and the dam."

The grand jury made it's recommendations based on the fact the district's primary charge, since it was set up in 1977, has been to boost the peninsula's water supply.

As water officials see it, if the district were to disband, its current functions would be carried out through a special branch of the Monterey County Water Resources Agency.

PB Co. tax impact held by the county. The CUSD is not the only agency affected by the reassessment.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District will be debited $17,626. It, too, had set money aside in the event it would have to make a refund.

"When we did our budget this year, we didn't count on that money — so we are all right," said Jim Cofer, the water district's general manager, noting the district had not earmarked county tax revenue.

Likewise, the school district had "set aside" $200,000 from this year's budget. "We did not take this money from any particular category."

But school officials have the sneaking suspicious it is deferred maintenance that may be the most harmed.

Two installments

Bialek said the windfall of the past couple of years made it possible, for starters, for the district to buy a couple of new school buses and to invest about $150,000 into computers both at lower and higher grade levels.

CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin laments the state of the district's 16-bus fleet, whose oldest vehicle is vintage 1962. "Ideally, we should now replace three buses a year for the next four years to get our fleet back where it should be. Some of these buses do not meet safety features; it is difficult to get them parts, and they require a good deal of maintenance."

Despite his frustrations, Baldwin takes a philosophical approach to the reassessment and his district's resulting loss of revenue.

"We would have hoped we could have used this money for deferred maintenance, (but) the county was trying to correct a problem. We shouldn't have been entitled to this money in the first place. Yet I think there has been a little disappointment it didn't come through."

School choice inititive issue gearing up for local debate

private schools that may not require sex education or other curricula they find offensive.

"Freedom of choice operates everywhere else in society," said Burke Cree, an ordained minister and adamant supporter of the amendment. "This (the public school system) is the last vestige of socialism," Cree argued, noting that many countries allow parents to choose where their children attend school, including Holland, Denmark, Germany, Australia, Sweden, and Poland.

"We believe that under this plan, more money will reach the classroom teacher," Cree added. "We're doing this because we want to save public schools."

"I believe in the ability of individual parents to choose," Cree continued. "I think it will pass if people learn the truth."

"The stereotype is that our group is made up entirely of right-wing religious fundamentalists," Leahy said. "The truth is, they consist of parents who represent all races and a broad spectrum of incomes."

Cooperation needed most

But local public school administrators are worried that the measure would undermine the welfare of the public school system, at a time when cooperation, not division, is needed most.

CUSD officials are concerned that:

•The voucher system as planned would be fundamentally discriminatory, since the $2500 per student is not enough to fund most private school educations. Thus only higher-income families would really be able to take advantage of the vouchers.

•The initiative would grant public money to unregulated private schools, which offer no safeguards against discrimination on the basis of race, religion, sexual orientation, academic achievement, or medical condition, and are not subject to state standards governing curricula and behavior.

•Such a system would cost California taxpayers $1.5 billion a year, by "siphoning tax dollars from our public schools."

"Their argument is that the public school system is ailing and needs to be changed," said Carmel Unified School District Superintendent Vance Baldwin. "I would agree with that, but I don't think the voucher system, as proposed, is a viable solution.

"It would cause chaos at a time when we really should be pulling together to improve public schools for all children."

CUSD board members unanimously approved a resolution last spring officially opposing the Parental Choice for Education Amendment.

Proponents of the measure argue that competition is healthy and improvement is the end result. But Baldwin explained that society benefits when all the populous is educated, not just the best and the brightest.

Next year California voters will decide if public monies should be used to finance a child's education at a private school. The debate will undoubtedly rage until then.

1992 fire stats

By PAUL WOLF

AS YEARS go, 1992 wasn't bad for the Carmel Fire Department — or, better still, for the residents the CFD is charged with protecting.

No Christmas tree fires last year. No deaths or injuries from flames or smoke. And the least amount of overall fire damage in at least a decade, according to Art Black, CFD fire prevention specialist.

In the category of fire damage to commercial, residential and vehicle fires for 1992, the CFD recorded a total value at $24,300.

Black said he was "particularly happy and gratified" that the total commercial damage was only $6,800, providing a second low-damage year in a row.

Commercial fire damage in 1991 was a mere $2,250; in 1990 it was $9,500.

It is Black who compiles the year-end figures, and submits them to the Carmel City Council for review.

It remains the case that there has not been a fire fatality within the city limits sihce October of 1981; so fire officials have not come to expect such tragedies.

All told, there were 751 calls in 1992, as compared to 795 in the preceding year.

Although the total was lower than that of 1991, Black said, "It is still a very large number of calls when you consider we are a single-station, primarily-paid staff department."

Not surprisingly, just about exactly half of the department's calls were for medical emergencies. By no means were the rest for fires or potential fires.

For starters, Decembers stormy weather caused downed limbs and wires, as well as flooding. The winter months often bring additional "environmental calls."

The weather has been largely responsible for a 22 calls in the first four days of 1993.

Peninsula Palate

By Chef Wendy Brodie

Woman chef from Down Under

WOMEN ARE alive and well in the food industry and one such woman is Stephanie Alexander of Stephanie's Restaurant in Melbourne, Australia. The setting is a National Trust historic two-story Italianate stone mansion, beautifully landscaped in a nearby suburb of town (405 Tooronga Rd. East Hawthorn 3123 Victoria).

I stumbled on her by accident. I was in Graham's Book Store in Sydney and was trying to find some more cookbooks by Elise Pascoe (a food writer and chef that I had met some years ago doing a cooking demonstration at a wine conference in Washington D.C) when the clerk helping me asked if I was familiar with Stephanie Alexander and showed me her books.

I bought both "STEPHANIE'S Australia Traveling and Tasting and Stephanie's Feast and Stories". The moment I got to Melbourne I called to see if I could meet her only to discover she was in Europe for a few weeks. However, her partner Dure Dara was, I am sure ,an equal discovery. I went to lunch in this magnificent building to a menu that showed the eclectic knowledge and care that Stephanie puts into her food and writing.

I started out with a glass of Craig Avon Chardonnay and assorted entrees (entree is the word used for first courses) of olives and goat cheese souffle with caponata and a Fremantle anchovy on an olive bread crouton, smoked Springs salmon with a pear and cucumber salad and buttered wattleseed blini, rustic terrine of pigeon confit with pigeon livers and duck giblets; beetroot and frisee salad and toasted walnut bread, asparagus and walnut custard tart with fresh asparagus, shaved pecorino and devilled walnuts.

Would you believe a banana split?

Then for the main course I had grilled paillard of lamb loin with a zucchini frittata and pesto. That was superb along with an irresistible restaurant-made bread. Just to add a few more calories, I tried the banana split which had the usual vanilla ice cream and chocolate sauce, but their version had passionfruit, it was sumptuous. Dure sat with me and we talked of food (of course) along with Stephanie's sensitive and creative approach to cuisine.

I had brought both my books for autographing and to my luck they traded me with signed ones along with giving me another one of hers entitled "Stephanie's Menus for Food Lovers".

Prawn quenelle with tiny onions

After reading that book I thought I would share her recipe for "Prawn quenelle with tiny onions simmered in red wine," serves six:

2 lbs. fresh uncooked prawns, 3-4 egg whites, 6-8 oz. cream, salt, white pepper. To prepare the quenelle, chill the canister of the food processor for 1 hr. Shell and devein prawns (save shells for sauce). Weigh after the cleaning process. You will have about 9-12 oz. pure meat.

For each 3 oz. prawn flesh, use 1 egg white and 2 oz. cream. Process prawns in chilled food processor. Add egg whites and process with motor running until the mix is very firm and really shines. Scrape mixture from sides at least once. Transfer purée to a bowl and return washed canister to the freezer. Press purée through a fine sieve to extract all fine shreds of tissue, etc. Chill in refrigerator for at least one hour. Return to chilled canister and add cream in two batches, also salt & pepper.

Cream should be well incorporated. Because everything is so cold, there is little danger of the cream curdling so don't be frightened to let it run. Poach 1 tsp. of mixture in a pan of very lightly salted water to test for salt and pepper. Cover with plastic film and store quenelle mix in the refrigerator until needed.

This can be made in the morning of your dinner, but not the day before. To cook the quenelles have ready a shallow pan at simmering point and your sauce also at the ready in a warm place. With 2 tablespoons dipped in hot water, mold egg-shaped quenelles and float them into the water. Turn over after 1 or 2 minutes, depending on size. One small egg-sized quenelle is sufficient for an entree (first course).

If you wanted really tiny quenelles as a garnish for a consommé or garnish a poached trout, for example, put the mix in a piping bag with a small open nozzle and squeeze tiny balls into the simmering water. Do not poach them directly in the consommé, as they will cloud it. As the quenelles are ready, lift each out with a slotted spoon, rest it briefly on a folded very clean cloth to drain, and place directly onto the ready waiting hot plate. Sauce and serve.

Onions simmered in red wine

Twelve small peeled white onions, 1/2 cup red wine, 1/2 cup red wine vinegar, 1 tsp. sugar. Bring liquid and sugar to the boil in an enamelled or stainless-steel

Junipero Serra School students launch quarterly newspaper

By SCOTT BREARTON

NINETEEN MEMBERS of the Junipero Serra School Journalism Club have published the first edition of what they hope will be a permanent fixture at the Catholic elementary.

The Times, a student-run quarterly newspaper, is produced under the direction of club advisor Mark Merfeld, a fifth-grade teacher who also teaches sixth-grade language arts at Junipero Serra School. He has worked as a professional journalist for about 12 years – at weeklies, dailies, and for Monterey Life magazine.

"I've tried to get them started by teaching them the difference between a news story and a feature story," Merfeld said. "We talk about ideas, then they go out on their own time and go after the story. Sometimes I give them hints."

With feature stories, school news, sports coverage, movie reviews, art, graphics, quality photographs taken by club members, and even local advertising, the fledgling paper has the slick look and feel of a trade journal designed by professionals thrice their age.

A "Letters to the Editor" section and an editorial page allows students to air their concerns and complaints, just like a community newspaper would.

Merfeld said seventh-grader Kirsten Ziomeck, the student editor, is very valuable to the operation because "she helps organize the paper and really gets the students to turn in their assignments on time. She also writes the editorial and feature stories."

Ziomeck acts as a liaison between students and their advisor, Merfeld explained, which is helpful. "Since the students are all at different grade levels, it's sometimes difficult for them to get together as a group.

Another news source

"Each class is represented by a feature story rather than just a summary of what they have been studying," said Merfeld, explaining that before The Times began publication, a student council newsletter was the only campus news source at Junipero Serra School.

But there's something suspicious about this twelve-page quarterly. Are these kids getting more faculty help than the staff box would lead one to believe?

"We're just letting them (fifth-, sixth-, and seventh-graders) do the writing," Merfeld explained. "As time allows, the older students will be doing more of the editing."

Stories are input on a school-owned IBM computer by faculty members. Stories are laid out on the pages by Merfeld and Dave Resco, a parent volunteer, using PageMaker, a desktop publishing program for Macintosh computers.

Rick Shea, another parent volunteer, spearheads the advertising effort, selling space in the back pages of the paper to local business owners. Proceeds from sales go back into the project, to fund future issues.

"Students and I are responsible for the first eight pages of copy, Merfeld said. "There's a lot of work involved. The kids are learning how to interview people and write news stories."

The Junipero Serra School Times is distributed to local churches, businesses, and to students, of course.

Merfeld is in the process of compiling an alumni list so that former students may receive The Times.

saucepan and simmer the onions slowly with a lid on for about 30 minutes or until tender and the liquid is absorbed. Keep warm till ready to serve.

Red-wine sauce for quenelle (or other fish dish). One TBSP. finely chopped shallot or mild onion, 1 clove of garlic finely chopped, 2 TBSP. unsalted butter, 4 large tomatoes peeled seeded and chopped fine, 1 TBSP cognac, reserved prawn shells, not heads, 1/2 cup fish stock, 1/4 cup red wine, 1/2 bayleaf, 1 small sprig thyme, ground pepper, chives or parsley, not to finely chopped, 4 TBSP. cold unsalted butter for thickening sauce. Soften onion and garlic in butter for 1-2 minutes. Add tomatoes and cook 5 minutes until soft and starting to look dry. Add cognac, increase heat, bubble 1 minute, stirring. Add prawn shells, stirring and lifting. Pour in liquids and seasonings. Cover and simmer all together for 5 minutes. Press liquid through a fine sieve, extracting every drop of juice. You should have about 1 cup of sauce base. You can make the sauce to this point several hours before dinner. Finish while the quenelles are poaching. Return sauce base to the rinsed-out pan, simmer and quickly whisk or swirl in the extra butter. Keep warm for the few minutes it takes to poach and drain the quenelles. Spoon sauce on hot plates. Add small onions. Add quenelle. Sprinkle over chopped herbs. If the onions and sauce base were completed before the meal, steam the onions hot before adding them to the hot sauce.

For all this effort, which sounds worse than it is, I would serve four people, not six.

Fireplace safety tips

WITH WINTER upon us and our fireplaces beckoning, the Carmel Fire Department offers the following safety tips.

- Have your fireplace and chimney inspected by a licensed, certified chimney sweep. Check the yellow pages.
- Remember that the type of fuel you use in your fireplace makes a difference. Soft woods like pine and cypress will cause a greater buildup of creosote than harder woods like oak. If you use commercially prepared logs, bear in mind they are made primarily of sawdust and glue — so heed the instructions.
- Use a metal bucket to dispose of ashes. Ashes will retain heat, so they should never be discarded in plastic garbage cans until they are completely cold.
- Never start a fire in the fireplace with flammable liquids. Never burn charcoal briquets in your fireplace, or in an indoor barbecue or hibachi. Charcoal gives off deadly carbon monoxide gas.
- Keep a metal or glass screen in front of the fireplace. It will protect you from flying embers and from the flames themselves.
- Never close your damper with hot ashes in the fireplace. Doing so could cause the fire heat up again and ignite the room while you're asleep.

Live in Style

We visited many rental retirement communities in the area before deciding to move to Valley Heights.

We knew exactly the type of community we wanted to be a part of and we found everything we were searching for at Valley Heights.

The atmosphere is warm and friendly. The residents are independent and active like we are.

The apartments are very spacious with lots of amenities just like our own home. We enjoy the full kitchen with a dishwasher, disposal and stove. We even have our own washer and dryer unit in our apartment.

Having the owners, Richard and Kelly on the premises seems to make quite a difference in the quality of the services. They have operated Valley Convalescent Home for the past 30 years. It is comforting to know that assistance is available if needed.

Best of all Valley Heights creates an environment that allows us to maintain our independence by providing all the support services we need to remain active.

We appreciate the open seating in the dining room and the flexibility of being able to dine at our convenience, according to our schedule.

Pacific Meadows

Good news for the new year

By SUSAN BECK

DO YOU know what its like to be looking for a needle in a haystack in the dark with a herd of buffalo approaching at high speeds in your direction?

Well, most of the residents and guests of Pacific Meadow's Retirement Community can relate to the scenario every time they try to find the left-hand turnout to the community's driveway off Carmel Valley Road anytime after dusk.

Then, if and when you achieve that goal, try to get across to the entrance of the driveway in a foot-to-the-floor on the gas peddle dash in an effort to avoid getting clipped by high-speed traffic coming west.

The big problem in this pursuit is the obstructed view created by overgrown shrubs and bushes.

And, if that isn't enough to raise the hair on the back of your neck, try to cross Carmel Valley Road from Pacific Meadow's driveway to make a left-hand turn going east. Or, just a simple right-hand turn going west at the bottom of the driveway.

This list of potential disaster situations has been a great concern for the residents of the practically brand new senior housing community since it opened at the end of 1991.

Finally, Norman Grant, vice president of Pacific Meadow's Resident Council, decided to take the matter into his own hands.

He contacted Rep. Leon Panetta's office several times over the last month and was reassured that the situation would be looked into.

But, with all the excitement about Panetta's appointment to President-elect Bill Clinton's cabinet, the urgency of the problem seems to have slipped through the cracks of the Congressman's priorities.

Also, about a month ago, someone in the county was told about the hazardous intersection, but no one ever called back to check it out.

"There are so many damn agencies," said Grant, "I don't know who to call. People want to come here to retire and live peacefully. It would be terrible to suddenly have someone taken away from us when a little preventive measure would deter a traffic disaster. What's a life worth?"

All that is needed are some reflectors, cross-traffic signs, weeding, and shrub removal.

"I'm talking about a job that would cost about $500. Something has to be done," Grant said Tuesday evening.

Well, something is going to be done.

Karin Strasser Kauffman, Carmel Valley's supervisor, found out about Grant's distress and called public works. Her call resulted in a long-awaited response to the residents' concern.

"I'm getting everything I want and more," said Grant. He talked with George Divine, public work's senior civil engineer, who said that county workers would be out to cut down the obstructing shrubs and bushes right away.

"He said our request was perfectly reasonable – the signs, the reflectors, everything. This has been going on for over a year, and now, in two days, bingo," said Grant.

Strasser Kauffman said that public works will work with the residents to provide a safe interesection.

"It is especially important in the case of a retirement community that there is no question about safety."

Peter Coakley

CV Village is the center of local innkeeper's life

By SUSAN BECK

EARLY ON Peter Coakley knew that he wanted to own a little place by the time he was 40.

He methodically set out to reach that goal which came in the form of the Valley Lodge in Carmel Valley.

It all got started during his studies at the University of California at Berkeley. He took off for the summer to work in Yosemite. He worked in the kitchens, washed dishes, waited tables and shoveled snow.

But, working the "back of the house" didn't appeal to him. What he did like was working the front desk.

"I was dealing with people in a pleasant frame of mind. They were vacationing and anticipated having a great experience," said Coakley. "It was easy to fulfill their anticipation. It was good, interesting work, and that's when I decided I'd like to get into it."

He soon switched over from Berkeley to the City College of San Francisco because they had a Hotel/Restaurant Management division.

After that he went to Lausanne, Switzerland, to enroll in the world-class chef's school Ecole Hoteliere. But, there was a three-year waiting list. So, he did the next best thing. He asked for a job at the best hotel in town, the Beaurivage Palace on Lake Geneva where he was turned down because he didn't speak French.

Not to be deterred, he took French lessons instead of cooking classes at the chef school. While he was learning the basics of French, a publishing house in the States offered a scholarship for an American to be enrolled at the hoteliere. He was asked if he wanted it.

"It was a stoke of absolute luck," said Coakley. "I was the only American there, and they wanted to make it easy."

When he returned home to San Francisco he took a job in sales for the St. Francis Hotel. That led to jobs with the San Francisco Hilton, The Fairmont Hotels, resort properties in Colorado. And in 1975 after five years of Marketing and Sales for three Holiday Inns, Coakley and his wife, Sherry, bought the 17-unit lodge on Ford Road just before the village.

It was a round-the-clock job for both of them.

Three years later, on a cold morning in January and with three children to raise, and a lot of hard work behind them with no money coming in, he said to his wife, "We're not making it. We either expand or go to work for someone else." She told him that she trusted whatever decision he thought was best.

"I knew from having been in the hotel sales market that training seminars for small groups was a field that was ideal for our hotel, if we had a conference center," said Coakley.

He took a chance and built the center and added 14 units.

The Valley Lodge has been a success story every since.

With a single-minded determination and love of dealing with people it is not a wonder that he has been involved with

CHAPS

Home base is close at hand

By SUSAN BECK

WHERE THERE'S a will, there's a way.

And few understand that better than Kathleen Tarp, executive director for California Horse Adoption and Protection Society (CHAPS).

The organization is in the process of centrally locating all of its adopted animals on 10 acres of the Riley Ranch on Highway One.

Ted Richter, owner of a portion of the ranch, donated the use of the land to CHAPS, which Tarp said, "helped us realize the dream of having a horse shelter where we can provide the proper nutrition, training and lots of love."

CHAPS rescued animals are ready for adoption

But, all of those expectations couldn't happen right away. First, there was the task of getting the place in shape. It started in August, and with the help of volunteers from the Defense Language Institute among others, Tarp and CHAP'S animal trainer and behavioral therapist, Bonnie Stoehm, the job is almost finished.

By the end of January, all 15 of CHAPS adopted animals will be "home" and all but Sam, Jasmine, and Bonny Too, will be available for adoption. Previously, Stoehm drove 3,000 miles a month to three counties to take care of the animals in foster homes.

Tarp has great plans for the future of CHAPS. For starters, there will be a volunteer training seminar on Saturday, Jan. 16 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Anyone who is interested may call 624-8464 to find out more about the program.

The following weekend, Jan. 23, the CHAPS shelter will be open to the public from noon to 3 p.m. Tarp has scheduled one day a month for people to come a visit the animals and get to know more about the organization.

Also in the works is a Winter Equine Educational Series. The first one will be Wednesday, Jan. 27, at the Crossroads Shopping Center Community Room on Rio Road in Carmel from 6:30-10 p.m.

Some of the topics will be nutrition, veterinarian issues, horse theft and how to deal with horses during a natural disaster.

Tarp said that recent estimates indicate that 80 percent of all American horses are abused or neglected.

"It's not out of meanness. It's out of ignorance," said Tarp. "That's our main goal: To educate people about abusing animals."

Village life is fulfilling

the local Chamber of Commerce since he moved to Carmel Valley, and he is also one of the founders of the Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee (CVVIC).

"We all lived and worked in the village," said Coakley. "It's a unincorporated county town. The county supervisors didn't pay attention to it, but they were the governing authority. It was a rag-tag town with no direction or planning. We wanted to control its destiny."

The first thing the committee did was to apply for underground utilities in 1979. In 1986 the work got started. The next year they wanted to start a pathway project to connect both ends of the village.

"There was only one problem," said Coakley, "no money."

CVVIC members put their heads together and came up with the Village Affair in 1990. The event has raised $70-$80,000 in three years and the committee has spent $100,000. Twenty-one thousand dollars came from county funds.

"This year's event is going to be bigger and better than before," said Coakley. The next big project slated for CVVIC is a Welcome Garden Park at the entrance to the village.

"There has been a dramatic improvement in ambiance and charm in the village. All of the improvements have a rustic, rural theme. We are not trying to glitz the place at all. Everything fits in well with the local atmosphere."

All this fixing up is bound to attract more tourist, which may or may not be a hardship on preserving the rural character of Carmel Valley, depending on your point of view.

As an innkeeper, 100 percent occupancy every day would be great. The idea he said is to "keep the sheets warm, and the glasses dirty."

He is sympathetic with the concerns about creating more traffic problems, but defends tourism as being a clean industry.

"It's an industry without smokestacks. Every new dollar turns over five or six times in a community."

There doesn't seem to be any reason for him to not keep right on doing what he does best. But, he said, "If I did switch gears, I would build log homes. I built one for myself, and I loved it. Maybe I'd go to Utah or Tahoe where log homes fit in."

He doesn't ever want to move away from here, just build somewhere else. "We love it here. We live and work here, like the people, everything. This is the center of our universe."

Doris Day's Best Friends

Giving pets as gifts

NOW THAT the holidays are over, we know that our pet foundation phones will soon be busier than usual.

You see, many people think that puppies and kittens make wonderful holiday gifts. They go to a pet shop and choose an adorable little companion for someone special – only to find out that "special someone" (1) can't have a pet in their rented apartment or house, (2) is allergic to pets, or (3) doesn't want the responsibility of a pet. Now what do you do?

The fact is, "living gifts" shouldn't be a surprise. Most people have very different ideas about the type of pet they want – no matter what they say. When you have something particular in mind, nothing else will do. Then, of course, there are those of us who simply melt at the sight of any critter, larger or small, young or old – but that's another story! Just keep in mind that choosing a pet is an important decision, and a very personal one, and it certainly should be made by the prospective owner, not a well-meaning friend.

Uplifting news

Did you know...

•The number of animals trapped for fur has fallen from 45 million in 1981 to 3.3 million in 1991. Animal fur revenues have halved since 1987.

•The number of licensed hunters in the U.S. fell from over 20 million in 1981 to less than 16 million in 1991.

•The number of homeless animals destroyed in shelters fell from about 20 million in 1981 to 6 million in 1991.

•The number of dogs used in federally funded research is down 92 percent since 1964.

•The number of U.S. vegetarians is up from 2 percent of the population in 1981 to 6 percent now (about 15 million people).

•Horse racing is down. $927 million was wagered at New Jersey racetracks in 1960, and $521 million in 1988.

•Polls indicate that up to 89 percent of teens and 66 percent of adults support protecting endangered species, and up to 70 percent of adults support some kind of animal rights.

Isn't it wonderful that we can be so encouraged by this information? Let's hope that our efforts continue to make a difference so that some day we will truly be caretakers for our Best Friends.

That's all for today, see you next week!

Caution advised this winter

THREE DIVERS were rescued from cold, rough waters near the Lone Cypress in Pebble Beach Dec. 27.

The men surfaced from a short dive to find their dive boat and its operator missing – it had taken on water, leaving the boat's operator, Douglas Broyles of Upland, California, no option but to swim to shore. Luckily, the vessel was only about 50 yards from shore when it began to sink.

Though cold and tired, the three divers, otherwise unharmed, were rescued about an hour later by a pleasure boat who heard the Coast Guard distress call over the radio and came to aid the men.

Pacific Grove Marine Rescue, the Sheriff's Department, local fire departments, and State Park Lifeguard Erik Landry also responded to the call.

"They gave the 'we're O.K.' signal, but I wanted to make sure they were all right, so I paddled my paddleboard out to where they were," Landry said.

According to Landry, he sat in the kelp bed with the men for about ten minutes before the other vessel arrived. He said the divers made the right choice in waiting for help to arrive rather than attempting to swim to shore, where rough waves and a rocky shoreline may have caused more serious problems for them.

Their 18-foot boat later resurfaced and washed in near Cypress Point, according to a Coast Guard spokesperson. All major equipment was recovered from the vessel and no oil or fuel spilled into the ocean.

AN ARTICLE by Bruce Watkins appearing in the San Francisco Chroniele (Dec. 28) gave a disturbing account of a "Graveyard of Sharks in Monterey Harbor."

In a recent scuba dive in and around the Monterey Harbor, members of the Pelagic Shark Research Foundation documented dozens of dead blue sharks, rays, and other marine creatures littering the ocean floor beneath Wharf # 2. According to Watkins, the dead sharks are a by-product of the squid fishing industry, which has no use for the scavengers that wind up in the nets during their purse seining operations.

Watkins, the director of the Foundation and expert diver, acknowledges that the impact of incidental take on shark populations is difficult to measure. But he notes that sharks – by feeding on dead and dying fish – have an important role in the ocean's ecosystem, and probably contribute to the overall health of the commercial fishing industry.

AREA SURFERS continue to enjoy a good variety of waves in and around the Monterey Peninsula. Though "epic" would be stretching it, those knowledgeable of the Peninsula's nooks and crannies have enjoyed no shortage of quality surf this winter.

A sizeable west swell arrived to the region Dec. 28, preceding a storm that dumped over two inches of rain on Monterey County. But the swell lacked the strength, shape, and consistency of the northwest groundswell that hit around Thanksgiving .

Still waiting for the right stuff? There's a lot more winter yet to come...

Mission statement

A FRESH new year is a good opportunity to transition into a different way of reporting the "social news." This is a good time for us to remind ourselves why we're here, what we're all about, who we are.

When I began writing this column nearly three years ago I edited the title on the masthead from "society columnist" to "columnist." Not too many people noticed. To those who operate on the inertia of past experience I will never be anything but the "social columnist."

But times change. High society used to exist purely for its own sake and for our vicarious pleasure. The eternally beautiful women and dashing gents who sipped champagne, supped on caviar and oysters and danced under the stars, as we read about their charmed lives in the society pages of the newspaper, are gone. Now, real society has little interest in having its private life and gatherings bandied about in the media.

Today's general readership may believe what they're reading is viable reportage of local social events when in actuality most of today's so-called "social news" is handfed to the press by public relations staffers or volunteers working for a major charity or organization.

It's time for change. Time to call a spade a spade. There are as many real stories in the realm of public service as there are volunteers. Employing thousands of people, whether for monetary or intrinsic compensation, charitable events are vital to the life of our peninsula.

But tried and true formulas no longer produce desired results. It was recently reported in this column (Dec. 17, 1992) that several long-standing "social" events are struggling to exist into the nineties. One fund-raising veteran was quoted as saying she's tried of the same old cocktail parties, dinners, silent auctions.

Life style sections and departments in numerous magazines and newspapers have heeded the changing times and revamped the society pages, and in doing so, given readers what they want. People expect substance, they want to know what's really going on, they're not swallowing the sugar-coated pill as easily as they used to. That's not to say they expect to read dirt or gossip, but contemporary, intelligent readers look for the real story. They want to be educated, not pandered to. They call, they write, they say, "More of it, tell us the real story."

To those readers who understood when I changed my title on the masthead and said I was interested in reporting all events, whether they be black tie or boots and chaps optional, thank you. Please keep calling me with your suggestions, your ideas, with what you would like to see in print. Whether you're on the liberal or conservative side of the ledger, fund-raiser or hell raiser, join me in future issues for insights into the real reasons we live on the Monterey Peninsula.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Our most valuable asset

AT THE beginning of each New Year men toot out wise but hackneyed aphorisms. Here is a classic example of this art of the obvious though it still has a world message.

Every 24 hours Almighty God gives us a day to use as we will. We exchange a day of our life for each day of time. When the day is done we are left with something we traded for and we should get our money's worth. We should have gained not lost; we should have reaped success not failure and we should not regret the price we paid for the use of time—our most valuable asset.

This is good advice, which like most advice, we will take with a grain of salt.

Finally, the dollar does not do as much for us as it used to, but then we don't do as much for the dollar either.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the first retirement plan in the U.S. was set up by American Express in 1875. It covered employees who were disabled after at least 20 years of service. In the 1980s, almost 80 million Americans were covered by pension plans. But company-paid pensions may have passed a peak. At the end of the 1970s, about 49 percent of workers participated in company pension plans. By 1991, the proportion had slipped to 43 percent. The trend emphasizes the need for employees to chart their own means of saving for retirement years.

The Natural History Report

By Craig Hohenberger

Avian research begins at Big Sur Ornithology Lab

AN ORNITHOLOGIST'S cry of excitement permeates the morning stillness, eliciting news of recently captured birds. All available ornithologists, volunteers, and students grab their "banding bags" and rush to help with the process of removing birds from one of the twelve mist-nets along the Big Sur River.

Enthusiasm unites us all with this ecological research project, as we anticipate what species and how many birds have been captured. We arrive with amazement to a mist-net filled with a variety of our wintering birds. Quickly, experienced biologists begin assisting the ornithologist with, at times, the involved task of untangling the birds from these ostensibly oversized and cryptically placed "arachnid webs" (mist-nets). At first, there appears to be only five or six birds in the net, but, with more careful scrutiny, we count 12 birds of five different species. In the mid-to-upper tiers of the mist-net we begin working upon freeing three Common Bush-tits, four Ruby-Crowned Kinglets, and two Yellow-Rumped Warblers. The lower mist-net tiers have trapped two Bewick's Wrens and one Song Sparrow. Soon after the biologists' arrival, the birds have been successfully removed from the mist-nets and transferred to the "banding bags" to be transported back to the Big Sur Ornithology Laboratory (BSOL) to be "processed."

Once at the lab, we quickly work to record the birds' morphometrics (measurements): species; sex; age; mass (weight); molt patterns; date, location, and time of capture; wing wear; fat; and most importantly, the placement of a U.S. Fish & Wildlife metal leg band on the tarsus of the bird which will individually identify the birds in the future. Soon after recording the data, we photograph the birds and release them at the site from where they were captured.

In North America, the U.S. and Canadian Governments cooperate in a continent-wide program to monitor the well-being and population dynamics of our birds through a labor-intensive bird-banding program. When we band a bird, the band bears a number and directions for notifying the Fish & Wildlife Service (F&WS) in Washington, D.C. After the band is attached to the bird's leg, a record is sent to the Bird Banding Laboratory at the Migratory Bird Populations Station, Laurel, Maryland, where it is placed on file. If at some future time a person recaptures, relocates, or finds a bird dead, that person can report the data to the F&WS, thus giving biologists valuable data on the individual bird's natural history. In North America, millions of birds have been banded, and every year over two million birds are marked.

Ultimately, banding studies allow us to determine a bird species' longevity, annual mortality, age of first breeding, assessment of health, territory size, sociobiology of a species, population dynamics, and insights into many other ecological concerns. Overall, the study of bird populations has practical relevance in conservation, pest-control and game management. The biomonitoring of avian species at Andrew Molera State Park will allow us to assess and address changes that may occur, resulting from global or local habitat destruction, pollution, and other environmental perturbations.

Established last spring

The Big Sur Ornithology Laboratory was established last spring in Andrew Molera State Park. The State Park offers a diversity of habitats, exemplified by the 300-plus species that have been recorded within the Park's 4000-plus acres. In May of 1992, the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary (BSOL) initiated one of its many projects, under the direction of the Monitoring Avian Productivity Survivorship (MAPS) program, a bird- banding station at Andrew Molera State Park. The MAPS program is a long-term study to measure avian productivity and survivorship as it relates to stochastic temperature fluctuations (global warming). The MAPS project is now in its third year of coordinating and analyzing data from a multitude of satellite banding stations nationwide. Bird productivity – how successful birds fledge their young – is closely associated with many physical and biotic environmental factors. However, temperature seems to be a strong selective force influencing a bird's success with rearing its offspring. Perhaps, by using birds as biological indicators, we may ultimately shed some light upon the controversial imminence of global warming.

Besides participating as a MAPS station, the Big Sur Ornithology Laboratory has subsequently augmented its banding programs with weekly research and educational classes. We are banding birds every weekend now (weather permitting), and beginning in mid-January, we will be offering a variety of classes, including bird-banding workshops for adults and kids. So far, the BSOL has banded over 230 individual birds of 35 different species. The BSOL envisions increasing its biomonitoring program in the near future with the hiring and training of additional staff and interns to operate the mist-nets on at least a three-days-per-week basis.

If you are interested in participating in the bird-banding classes or other classes at the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary Research & Education Center, please contact us as soon as possible to ensure a space in these classes. To help continue our research and education programming, we welcome any direct or indirect support. Thanks !

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

Powerful Padres ready for league play

AFTER AMASSING an impressive 10-2 pre-season record, the Padre varsity hoopsters are now looking to dominate upcoming Mission Trail Athletic League play. Having won eight out of its first nine games, Carmel finished off the pre-season last week with a tough loss to Los Gatos, and a big win over Watsonville.

Last Monday in Los Gatos, the Padres played hard in the first half, but couldn't hold on, and went on to lose 61-43.

"We were real sick that day," said head coach Rich Frank. "Ben Fahrer (a Padre starting guard) didn't play, and three other guys played despite being sick. We stayed close in the first half, but eventually ran out of gas."

PADRE HEAD coach Rich Frank goes over the game plan during a time out.

Carmel was down by only one point at half time, but ended up losing by 18 points. Their only other loss this season was to highly ranked Andrew Hill, and only by three points. In addition, both losses this season have been against big schools in Divisions I and II, while Carmel, with its small enrollment, plays in Division IV. And, although they lost to Hill and Los Gatos, Carmel did beat highly respected non-league opponents, Monterey and Seaside. An 18-point loss is not something that will be seen too often during league play, unless the Padres lose a player or two to injuries. Two Padres who weren't sick against Los Gatos, R.J. Powell and Nate Stiles, scored 15 and 11 points respectively.

NATE STILES (20) and Ben Fahrer (32) discuss the action while Ryan Edwards (31) looks lost on the court.

Outmanned Watsonville team

The following day the Padres played a totally outmanned Watsonville team. Carmel scored 27 points in the first quarter in route to a 32-point win, 66-34. R.J. Powell led the team with 15, Ben Fahrer, coming back from the flu, had nine, Jason Lindgren added eight, and Nate Stiles contributed 11. The real story of this game for the Padres, however, was Joey Bernhard, starting in place of Ryan Edwards, who was out with the flu. Bernhard scored 11, including a trey, in his first real opportunity this year.

"We put Joey in there and he came through for us," said Padre assistant coach Ron Powell. "He showed us that we can go to him when we need to."

Dylan Coleman also played well off the bench, scoring six while playing at the off-guard spot.

Going into league play, the Padres know they have a good team, but they have to stay on their toes.

"I feel good about the team, but we have to keep the intensity level up," said coach Frank.

"It's going to be a rough league season. Everybody (in the league) is playing well," said coach Powell. "It's going to boil down to which teams stay healthy and play consistently. We're taking it one game at a time."

PREPARE FOR WINTER STORMS

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors has proclaimed the week of Jan. 11-16 as "Winter Storm Preparedness Week in Monterey County."

County and local agencies will be promoting public awareness of storm related hazards such as flooding, erosion, mud slides, and utility disruptions, as well as how to prepare for and protect against these hazards. The six year drought experienced by the County has caused many county residents to take for granted our dry rivers, mild winters, and lack of damaging storms. The initial winter storm that recently reached Monterey County may have served as a precursor of what we could expect for the remainder of the season. While damage was generally limited and localized, this storm did serve to demonstrate our vulnerability to the inevitable results of winter storms, including flooding, mud slides, erosion, power outages, and other forms of damage. A few simple, common sense preparations by households and businesses can lessen the effects of winter storms.

For further information on what you can do to prepare your home or business for the winter storm season, contact the County of Monterey Office of Emergency Services at 755-5010. To determine whether your home or business is in a flood plain or to learn what you can do to protect yourself or your property from flood related damage, contact the County of Monterey Water Resources Agency at 755-4860. Flood insurance is available through your local agent.

Remember, if you believe your life or property are in imminent danger, call 911.

Art scene exhibiting strength

By JOHN DETRO

CARMEL'S CARL Cherry Center for the Arts announces a new show of paintings by San Jose's Eve Page and Robert Reynolds Hewitt from Monterey.

A two-hour public reception for the artists will start at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 9. The exhibit will run through Jan. 29.

"Page is drawn to alternative cultures and influenced heavily by the late Mexican artist Frida Kahlo," says Robert Reese of Cherry Center. "She's an avowed feminist artist with a strong exhibition record in San Jose, the San Francisco Bay Area, elsewhere."

And: "Hewitt taught art at the universities of Notre Dame and Seattle. He also served as Crafts Director for Army Special Services. And he displayed in juried shows in most states west of the Mississippi. His work combines acrylic, black wax, encaustic and pastel in pieces that are reminiscent of WPA commissions."

SANTA CATALINA School has a magical art exhibit coming right up: Children of the World Paint in a Single Language.

The international show will open Saturday, Jan. 9, and continue through Feb. 14 in the gallery of Sister Kieran Memorial Library. Gallery hours are 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday and 11 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday-Sunday.

The offering will include 70 pieces by artists from 37 countries and 4-16 years of age. Themes to be encountered: War and Peace, Festivals and Dance, Family and Friends, Sports and Play, Animals, Portraits, People at Work.

The exhibit is drawn from the permanent collection of Paintbrush Diplomacy, international children's art and letter exchange program based in the San Francisco Bay Area. More than 10,000 youngsters are part of the adventure at present.

A RECEPTION for Carmel Valley artist Ethel Alvy will be held from 7-9 p.m. Friday, Jan. 8, at Barbara Murphy's Portofino Coffee House in Pacific Grove.

Her Art in Boxes show — constructions employing found objects — will run there throughout this month.

"I collect things with nothing in mind," Alvy says. "That way, I can find items I'm not looking for."

Influenced by myths underlying this culture, Alvy adds: "The objects have to hold some mystery — first by themselves, and then in combination to form an environment or impression. I transform them into compositions that acquire new identities. My ammo boxes house a pharoah, madonna, psychiatrist, so many others."

Alvy studied at UCLA with John Altoon and William Brice. Her work is in private collections. Carmel, San Francisco and Los Angeles galleries have shown the boxed art.

THE ART Commission is presenting the work of Anita De Carlo and David Amland through Jan. 29 at Seaside City Hall Art Gallery.

Also represented there — sculptor Rick Smith.

A public reception for the artists will be held from 7-8:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 15, with guitarist Charles De Weese providing music. Refreshments will be served.

DON'T FORGET that photographer Loren List's black-and-white photographs are being shown through Jan. 30 at Carmel Valley Manor's Hallway Gallery.

And Big Sur artist Robert Skiles shows mixed media efforts — guache, watercolor, sumi — at the Henry Miller Library down there. Through Jan. 15.

Call 667-2574 if you wish additional data.

Comic precision pledged

GroveMont planning its fresh season

THE RUPERT Holmes comedy thriller Accomplice closed last month and was but the kick-off show in GroveMont Theater's 1993 Monterey Playhouse Season.

Other choices were noted this week by company founder Stephen Moorer and another strong voice over there:

• Tony Kushner's The Illusion will play "the month of February at our downtown venue," Moorer said. "It's a highly theatrical, humorous and profound adaptation from the original by Pierre Cornielle (written in 1639). And it challenges our perceptions of reality, our self-evaluations and our illusions about life and family. All with delightful comic precision."

A father consults a magician about his estranged son. The magician shows scenes from the younger man's life. This will be directed by Dan Gotch, GroveMont dramaturg and development chief.

• Next (depending on rights) will come one of two new farces — Lend Me A Tenor or Country Cops.

Both have been successful elsewhere with the critics praising their wild humor.

• Tentatively scheduled June through August is Nunsense Two — Dan Goggin's sequel to his much-praised musical comedy.

Rights negotiations are underway to bring "the nuns of Hoboken" back to Monterey.

• Gotch: "Christopher Durang remains our area's favorite controversial 'bad-boy' playwright; it's time for more of his black comic view of the world to take center stage." So DurangFest '93 will be included in the season during the months of November and December.

According to Dan, this will feature a mix of Durang plays, scenes and monologues. The fest's major works: Baby with the Bathwater and The Marriage of Bette and Boo.

Voices join symphony programs

BASS JOHN Ostendorf and Soprano Andrea Matthews will join Maestro Clark Suttle and Monterey County Symphony for Carmel performances of the Brahms choral masterpiece Ein deutsches Requiem.

The concerts will take place at 3 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 10, and 8 p.m. the next evening in Sunset Theater.

The program also includes Mozart's Symphony No. 40 in G Minor — perhaps his most familiar work in that form.

Tickets available

Tickets are available and may be reserved by calling 624-8511. These outings are sponsored by Miller's Carpet One of Monterey.

According to Symphony spokespersons, Ostendorf "enjoys a flourishing reputation as a musicianly and versatile vocal artist who uncovers and researches much of the repertoire he performs and records. He is regularly engaged by the orchestras of Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, St. Paul, San Francisco, many others."

And: "Andrea Matthews is one of America's foremost young lyric sopranos. She has sung extensively throughout the United States with such institutions as the Philadelphia Orchestra, Los Angeles Master Chorale, Mostly Mozart Festival at New York's Lincoln Center, National Symphony at Wolf Trap. She continues to perform with the Aachen Opera in Germany where she made her European debut."

Dr. Cuyler's translation

Ein deutsches Requiem will be sung in German. Dr. Louise Cuyler, program annotator for Monterey County Symphony, prepared an original translation of the German texts Brahms used as the basis of his landmark work. The audience will receive a copy of the text and its translation.

Monterey County Symphony Chorus is led by Director Ken Ahrens. Past chorus performances include Carmel's 75th Anniversary Concert in October 1991 and (most recently) on Dec. 19 at last year's inaugural concert of Music at the Mayflower, Pacific Grove, the Symphony's new chamber series.

The next concert in that series, in fact, will happen Feb. 20 and feature the chorus in works by Thomson and Bernstein.

Carmel Music Society presenting soprano of wide repute

Single tickets ($50 per) may be obtained in advance by calling 625-9938. Any remaining ducats will be sold at the door Friday evening.

Von Stade spent no time at all in the musical minor leagues. She won a contract from Sir Rudolf Bing during the Metropolitan Opera auditions of 1970. She has recorded more than three dozen albums (every major label).

The program will feature old and new music by such composers as Respighi, Puccini, Ginastera, Strauss, Satie, Poulenc.

For ticket reservations, call 624-3550. Annex seating costs $7 per, sanctuary seating $10.

"A six-foot viewing screen is used with closed circuit TV so that all seats have a clear view of the performer," Fors said. "The instrument is the new 32-rank Schoenstein pipe organ built for the church in 1991."

GIACOMO PUCCINI'S Tosca will be broadcast live from the Metropolitan Opera House on Saturday, Jan. 9. It will be heard locally over KAZU Public Radio with a 10:30 a.m. start time.

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Out of the gate

BOOKERS WELCOME the fresh-faced year by offering jazz and blues buffs some excellent situations. One might say that Kelly Leonard, Tim Jackson and others have come out of the gate very quickly—

• Kelly and wife Rosemary have, of course, Doc Ricketts' Lab near Cannery Row. Appearing there at 9 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 7, will be powerful bluesman Ron Thompson and bandmates — The Resistors.

Whether it be Monterey Bay Blues Fest or Slim's in San Francisco, guitarist Thompson enriches every scene he makes. Tickets for this local date cost just $5 apiece. Info: 649-4241.

• Tim's Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz ends its annual vacation with a knockout combination.

On Monday night, Jan. 11, you can check out Mose Allison (master blues vocalist and historian who also plays cutting-edge jazz piano).

Shows at 7:30 and 9:30 with tickets going for $14 advance (Ticketmaster) and $16 at the door.

Next night, the superb Pancho Sanchez Latin Jazz Band will feature one of the master percussionist's main influences — guest artist Mongo Santamaria. Same start times for the two shows and $15 advance or $17 door.

The Sanchez aggregation boasts two of my favorite players in any bag — pianist David Torres and the great trombonist Art Velasco. Their latest album is El Mejor on the Concord Picante label.

Upcoming: Roy Hargove Quintet (Jan. 18), Tony Williams Quintet (Jan. 25), Steve Khan Trio (Feb. 1), duo with alto saxist Frank Morgan plus the brilliant pianist and composer James Williams (Feb. 8), Steve Coleman and Five Elements (Feb. 22). Tony will bring in Wallace Roney, Billy Pierce, Mulgrew Miller.

As you realize, Friday nights at Kuumbwa stay with local and regional artists. Jazz vocalist Ann Whittington has handled this programming for the past eight years.

"Ann's leaving us to pursue other opportunities," Tim says. "Taking over (the Friday series) will be vocalist and arts activist Bobbi Todaro. Bobbi has been a Kuumbwa volunteer for several years and we look forward to the fresh spirit she will bring to the job."

• Producer Richard Armbrust continues the Mission Ranch Dances from 7-10 Thursday night, Jan. 7, with the Scott and Peggy Brown Band making music. She's a dynamite singer.

Admission's $8 per or $15 for two. Free dance lessons (6:30). Smoke-free environment. Full bar. Door prizes.

• Blues giant B.B. King will play Santa Cruz Civic Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 10. Tickets will run you $22.57 or $20.47. Call 429-3444 or 458-2313. Ticketmaster too.

• Papa Jake Stock and those Abalone Stompers will be the featured guests at Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society's first social event of 1993. It will run from 1:30-5:00 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 10, at the Moose Lodge in Del Rey Oaks.

Dancers welcome. Door charge: $4 (members) and $6 (non-members). All interested musicians are invited to take part in the trad jam.

• Vocalist Mary Anne Randl promises "soft Brazilian songs, gentle jazz and originals" when she works Pacific Grove's Portofino Coffee House starting at 8 p.m. Monday, Jan. 11.

Joining her for two sets will be Brazilian keyboardist Weber Drummond and guitarist Joseph Lucido. It's $6 per at the door; reservations recommended: 373-7379.

Lucido is the bandleader at Portofino's no-cost jazz celebrations each Sunday evening. These will continue, says house honcho (honchess?) Barbara Murphy.

• Jazzman Nick Williams signals that his popular series will enjoy its '93 kickoff at 7 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 7, at the Lumber Room in Carmel's Vista Lobos Park. These sessions draw performers like Bob Phillips, Jackie Coon, Buddy Jones, David Kempton, Judy Blair, Dennis Murphy, on and on. Modest donation optional.

• The Doubletree's Brasstree Lounge this month will feature Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra (Monday nights) and the strong Latin band Tocara (Thursdays).

The Lobby Lounge will have pianists Elly Fischbach (Jan. 9) and Ed Mendenhall (Jan. 16). Ed's a former Monterey Jazz Festival High School All-Star.

• In San Jose, the Full Faith and Credit Big Band will play Club Jazz from 3-6 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 24. Director Rich Bice says vocalist Morning Nichols will be on the set.

• Bindel's in downtown Monterey spotlights stylish singer and pianist Julie Domac. Thursday through Saturday nights.

• Jackie Coon Quartet warms the Casa Cafe (downtown Monterey). Thursday through Saturday nights.

Cave drawings inspire words of wisdom for '93

SEVERAL DAYS ago, our book column looked at a fresh title from New Mexico artist Walter Cooper, who accompanies his observations with versions of Indian cave drawings (ancient designs which he says inspire him mightily).

It's called Shards: Restoring the Shattered Spirit and it comes from Health Communications, Inc., at $12 per 240-page paperback.

It seems to us now that Cooper offers some good, strong words for the young year. Like so—

"It's the unrealized hungers of ours which lead us to cling to people and to things and to the beliefs of our human condition. If we search for our essential food any place other than the source, we search in vain. So we slumber on fitfully, waiting for the magic kiss which never comes."

"We know that life is too precious to waste on the expectations of others, too fleeting to squander on hollow goals. But how do we save ourselves from those squadrons of 'shoulds' which steal our creative fire...?"

"I need a long vacation. A sabbatical away from myself. I need to let go, to relax in this futile struggle against myself. To examine my thoughts and to realize the synthetic nature of my fears. To wonder why I am here in this world."

"Trying to patch the world's vast problems is like trying to hold water in a leaky radiator. We waste valuable time and limited resources. Solutions to our worldly concerns lie in our inner transformation, not outward repair."

"Since the aborigine first opened his eyes, mankind has fueled and maintained mighty beliefs regarding birth and death. Birth is seen as the genesis of life, the auspicious beginning; whereas death is viewed as the final curtain, the terrifying end.

"But what if both concepts are deceptive? What if we've been tricked by our sensory perception and there is no truth to the appearance of birth or death. What if what we're seeing are but vivid visual effects which radically alter the appearance of matter, and we have been mesmerized or moved or spooked by these effects?"

"Christ told us, 'My kingdom is not of this world,' meaning that God's house is on a different street from our human condition; that a separate reality exists for all who seek it here on Earth. Just as it was true 20 centuries ago, it remains true today. Like Christ himself, these sacred planes are ever-present. It is our stubborn and steadfast allegiance to human conditioning which is blocking our innate capacity to soar."

"Holding title to spiritual gifts does not automatically make them ours. The choice, however, always is — either we can learn to trust in this invisible activity and enter the great mystery or we perpetuate the coma."

"As science and technology continue to boost agricultural production, we realize there is enough food to feed the planet. But as long as a global view of scarcity prevails — along with the greed and insensitivity it generates — we will continue to witness widespread starvation, or bare subsistence for much of the world, and overconsumption for a relative few."

"Humor is a notable gift in the game of Spiritual Pursuit. It is essential to forgiveness."

"Although raising a child is not everyone's calling, what work could be more worthwhile? And who is better suited to raise your own child than you are? Why else would he or she be entrusted to your care? Regrettably this generation finds many parents delegating this sacred responsibility to strangers."

"...How can we possibly hear the wind in the cottonwoods or the cricket singing in the woodpile if our ears are always jammed with broadcast noise? How can we possibly hear each other? The tab we pay for our steady diet of junk food media is dear. It's time for a fast."

"Through thoughts and words and deeds we communicate with the rest of the world, but only through the quiet mind do we tabernacle with the Great Spirit."

"There must be a way for us as individuals to determine for ourselves whether or not a particular work authored by human hand is divinely inspired or not.

"By becoming intimately acquainted with the material and living with it firsthand, we begin to get a personal sense of it. Does it ring true? Does it have a life of its own? Is it calculated to manipulate some people or does it offer universal truths which serve us all? Does it give Light?"

"Never fear. Whatever it takes to wake us up is just around the corner."

"Watch how Coyote Mother handles her quarrelsome pups. Study her ways. Notice how she detaches herself from their incessant chattering and petty squabbling. See how she keeps her own mouth shut."

"When you listen, you are one person. When you say something, you become another person."

"Roadrunner searches for answers in every cult and crackpot religion he bumps into. When he's finally given up all faith and hope in finding any comfort there, he'll be closer than he's ever been."

"The very fact that you have been born is of the greatest significance."

Have a creative 1993. If you like books, Copper's is a useful one.

MONTEREY BAY COFFEEHOUSE BOOKSHOP

Opened by Estelle Cimino in November 1991, this downtown spot (472 Alvarado St.) has an airy and bright atmosphere that seems made for book lovers. "I've had a passion for books ever since I was a child," Estelle comments. Her caring can be seen in the full children's section, Arts, Self-Help, Business, Spirituality .....dozens of well-stocked categories. And the audio department delights with best-sellers read by excellent performers. "I really believe people come into a bookstore on a quest," she continues. "It's gratifying to be able to help our customers find the treasures they are seeking." The comfy coffee shop serves light lunches and desserts in addition to a fine array of espresso drinks. For-sale music CD's and cassettes provide a soothing and relaxing background. Computerized ordering. Magazines galore. Ample parking in rear lot. Hours: 9-10 Monday-Thursday; 9-10:30 Friday, Saturday. And 10-8 Sunday. 647-1822.

PEPPER PLANT HOT SAUCE

It's not too hot and not too mild, this delicious California-style sauce that can put the fun back into eating familiar dishes. With its pickled peppers and secret recipe, the sauce has begun appearing in area restaurants and markets. (Some folks have actually switched restaurants in order to put Pepper Plant on their breakfast eggs.) Ask your favorite grocer and chef to order by calling the nearest distributor – Frank of Gilroy's Good Egg Co. at 1-842-7881. Postscript: Pepper Plant makes a great Bloody Mary. And there's a new, tasty variation – Pepper Plant Sauce with garlic added. Also Salsa BBQ Sauce and Seasoning Spice.

Book Bag

By John Detro

The healing

Gracious Seasons. By Illia Thompson. Andrea Elliott & Co. of Mt. Hermon, CA. 72-page paperback. $13.

CARMEL VALLEY author Illia Thompson teaches creative writing at Monterey Peninsula College and holds Journaling Workshops ("a unique exploration into your inner self") throughout California.

When she lost husband Locksin to a long and terrible illness, she turned to her art: putting words on paper. The loving act (this book) represents a gift to all who'll find it during times of ostensible aloneness and pain.

"Writing," Illia says in a note to this column, "helped me come through a difficult time to a place of grace." If meeting the brave and talented being seems like something for your path, she'll have a book signing from 2-4 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 10, at The Thunderbird in The Barnyard.

This volume contains the poetic prose and poems (a few) of one year: July 1991-July 1992. She's a writer. The emotional implications abound, but she never stops noticing:

"Six months, according to folk lore or experience, or a seed just planted somewhere by a stray pod of knowledge, picked up while reading a magazine, seems to be the time needed to fully, or at least more clearly, understand, internalize, accept, survive, a crisis. This happened in our household. Our teenage son now writes expressively about the hospital stay of his father...(A)ll pages make their appearance on the redwood dining room table, with clear direction that we, his parents, read them...Words replace voids as we attempt to come to terms with disease after seemingly just approaching a place of ease in our lives."

Angels under that roof

Sympathetic relatives and friends are seen as angels: "But the grandest angel, Laura, whose presence slips in and out of this house tending so carefully to us all...cheerfully, gracefully, with an understanding from heights known only to her. This evening we share a family meal as my husband rests in the next room. During grace, I feel Laura become my sister...."

Near book's end: "I'm almost here. What does that mean? I'm almost feeling like the veil of death of a loved one in my life is being filled with little spaces through which I can look. I'm almost ready to be that which I need to be. To find the grace and joy of each day, the sorrow, too, but more as a seasoning than the entire main course. I'm almost ready not to be angry at the loss, and almost ready to be angry...."

And to all who know the bone-deep grief: "Don't think that being so tired that sleep plays tag / with waking night and day / that you will never sleep again from dusk to dawn."

The great message: We're never really alone. Illia has walked through the coldness. She has been there, and she has more than merely survived. She has found. Listen.

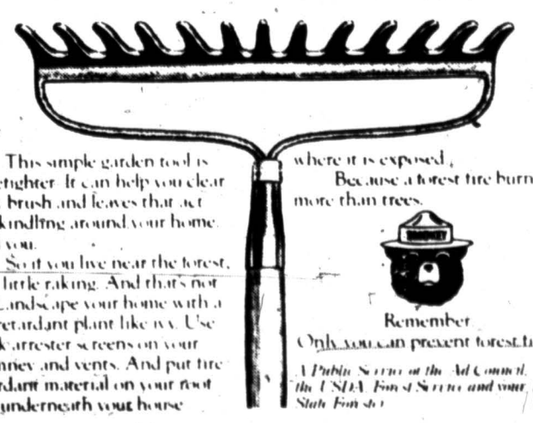
HOW THIS RAKE CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.



This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house where it is exposed.

Because a forest fire burns more than trees.

Remember.
Only you can prevent forest fires.

A Public Service of the Ad Council, the USDA Forest Service and your State Forester.
